

MARKET OUTLOOK

The Atlantic is quiet with little threat of major hurricanes making landfall. Natural gas storage continues its march toward a new end-of-season high as the EIA reported a 65 bcf injection for the week ending 8/28/09. Some analysts feel the market is oversold, while many speculate that the market will remain bearish until the economy shows stronger signals of recovery. This continues to be a good time to take a longer term position in the natural gas and electricity markets.
